

A photograph of a nursery with two children looking at plants. The nursery is filled with various potted plants, including flowers and herbs, arranged on shelves and tables. Two children, a boy and a girl, are in the foreground, looking at a tray of small potted plants. The boy is wearing a yellow shirt and the girl is wearing a dark jacket. The nursery has a high ceiling with a glass and metal structure, and many plants are hanging from the ceiling. The overall atmosphere is bright and cheerful.

Dutch Gardens Nursery

An expert guide to spring landscaping

It's springtime again, and with summer just around the corner, folks from throughout the area are busy planting gardens and readying their yards and landscaping. While many have a design scheme in mind and others just grab what's on sale at their local greenhouse, the folks at Dutch Garden Nursery in Edina are experts on landscaping and at times, even visit the homes of their clients to help create a blueprint for the outdoor experience that matches the personality of the homeowner.

"We will go out and make recommendations," said owner James Burkholder, who along with his wife, Christine, oversees the business. He said that while they mostly do hardscaping and the planting of shrubs and other vegetation, if a homeowner isn't sure of what they want, he will get pictures of the property and then draw out a plan on paper, adding circles and dots to locate where they feel a flower, bush or tree might look and fit best.

"Then we'll supply them with the plants or else we'll go plant it ourselves," he said.

James had no formal training or background when he and Christine began the business in 2005; just a love for horticulture.

"We were married for about four years and we had a couple of small children and I just had an interest in plants and greenhouses," he said. "We just stepped into it and learned as we went."

James has taken his informal study of plants and landscapes to a level of professionalism that only comes from experience and passion. He can look at a property and determine what's best for the north side, the south side, and the sides facing east and west. He understands sun and shade, water and soil, predators and pests... and he provides solutions to distressed homeowners that often lack a green thumb.

Hidden down two miles of dirt road that passes Edina Lake and endless acres of farmland, the giant nursery exists far from the beaten path and must be sought out as it can't be seen from any busy highway or town. For those who do take the time to find it, the trip is definitely worth their while as they will find more than they expected to formulate their summer landscapes.

Even on cold, late winter days, Dutch Garden Nursery is a busy place with customers filling the store and its surrounding sheds that hold plants, trees, mulch, rock, stones and decorative features that add character to a yard's beauty. Inside the store you can get seeds or bulbs of any kind to grow flowers, shrubs, trees or food. Most important of all, you can get advice from James on how to grow a garden that best reflects who you are.

Build A Yard Full of Memories

For those that want privacy, James recommends planting evergreens.

"There's a couple options you can go with," he said, noting the arborvitae line or thuja, which he said is fast growing and includes Emerald Greens, Green Giants, and Techny, "If you want something tougher, you get into your Juniper line that comes from the cedar family — and that's tough — tough as nails."

As for decorative bushes, James said that some the favorites are the boxwoods, weigelas, barberry, hydrangeas, roses and spirea, a somewhat flowering and colorful foliage he will often employ when designing a landscape.

"So you got some plants that got reddish foliage; you got your evergreens that are green, of course, and some of the other flowering shrubs or green leaves," James said. "With all of the flowering shrubs, we often have a yellow or red leaf with the flowers — and that really offsets everything — and you can have a really pretty variation."

He said that his clients have many choices of flowers, with annuals and perennials filling the nursery and will provide a rainbow of colors to an otherwise drab yard.

"We got lots of perennials to pick from that are flowering as well," he said. "We stick in a lot of daylilies, we stick in a lot of perennial salvia, a lot of perennial black-eyed Susan rudbeckias as well as cat pajama's."

Looking for a shade tree for your yard? Dutch Garden Nursery imports bare root trees from all over the U.S. and James recommends the red maple, which he said is the most popular shade tree they sell, though they do see a lot of oaks go out the doors. Bald cypress trees, linden trees, birch and aspens are also popular mainstays at the nursery.

"But when it comes to a really nice yard shade tree, you can't beat that red maple," he said. "Your October Glory, your Red Sunset and your Autumn Blaze."

Most of the shade trees they sell are in the six to eight foot tall range though some are larger and some smaller. Trees of that size that he planted on his property maybe 10 years ago, are now of a dimension where they provide considerable shade.

Fruit trees are also popular in the yards of Missourians with apples, peaches, pears and plums populating the yards of many.

He said that while they sell cherry trees at Dutch Nursery, and while they can grow well locally, they are more geared for more northern climates, so planting one comes with risks — and loss due to predator birds.

"If you can get the cherries before the birds do, good for you," he said. "I never grew any myself but there's people that buy them and we sell cherry trees every year. It definitely is a good fruit."

As for the mulch that helps plants to grow and thrive, there's plenty to choose from at Dutch Garden Nursery and all of them are good, James said.

"To add that to the soil is always a good idea," he said, noting that the store also sells a full line of insecticides, fungicides, weed mats and other treatments that will steer away weeds, mildew, rust, pests and predators.

So with summer fast approaching, now is the time to start planning and planting your garden, be it fruit trees and vegetables, shade trees, plants, bushes and shrubs. And if you're unsure what you want or what's best for you, take the time to visit James and Christine at Dutch Garden Nursery in Edina and ask what they might recommend.

Kirksville Kiwanis Farmers' Market Opens May 4

The Kirksville Kiwanis Farmers' Market starts May 4 and is open every Saturday from 7 a.m. until noon on the Elson Street side of the Kirksville Downtown Square. The market runs through October and is open to the public. Items available include fruits, vegetables, plants, baked products, eggs, meats, crafts, and much more.

TRUMAN GRAPHIC ARTS CAPSTONE EXHIBIT

The Truman Graphic Arts Capstone Exhibit will be held at the Sue Ross Arts Center, 215 S. Franklin Street in Kirksville. The Capstone is an annual exhibit by the graduating graphic arts majors at Truman. The students create a graphic art display for a business, with many of them being local businesses. The display includes a wide range of materials the businesses can use to promote themselves and includes: posters, signage, stationery, mugs, and many other items. The students hold a reception on the Friday before graduation which is attended by members of their families, faculty and members of the Kirksville community.

Kirksville Arts Association

Walker Family Exhibit • May 16-June 28

The Kirksville Arts Association will host the Walker Family Exhibit from May 16 through June 28 at the Sue Ross Arts Center, 215 S. Franklin Street, Kirksville.

The Walker Family Exhibit includes four members of this artistic family: Gerald, his father Merle and his uncles, James and Roy.

Gerald (1951-2023) was a graduate of Kirksville High School and Truman State University, Magna Cum Laude with a B. A. in Fine Arts. He also served in the Marine Corps. He earned a living as an artist painting personal and institutional commissions, including painting a series of presidential portraits for Truman State University and A. T. Still University.

One of his best known works is the mural that was recently refurbished on on South Franklin Street in Kirksville, across from the Sue Ross Arts Center. The mural includes images representing agriculture, education, medical facilities, industry, churches, and a red barn.

He also did landscapes and sold his work in a gallery in Arkansas. Gerald also created science fantasy works. Gerald was a popular portrait artist, and his work can be found at ATSU and NMSU.

Merle (1924-2018) was a native of Kirksville. He earned a Master of Fine Art from the University of Iowa in 1951.

He had served in World War II in Africa and Italy where he earned multiple medals including the Bronze Star and Purple Heart.

For a time he lived in San Diego where he worked for General Dynamics/Astro-Nautics as an engineering illustrator. After retiring he returned to Kirksville. he was well known for his oil painting of landscapes. He received many awards and prizes for his work.

James (1913-1994) was also a native of Kirksville. He received a Bachelor of Fine Art from the University of Iowa and then moved to New York City where he studied at the American Artists School. He also served in World War II and following the war, James received a Masters in Art History and a Masters in Fine Arts in studio printmaking from the University Of Iowa. In the 1950s, James taught at the Art Institute of Chicago and was named to the 100 Best New Talent List in 1956 and 1959.

Many of his paintings were abstracts. He later taught in high schools in the Chicago area retiring in 1975. He then moved to Arkansas where he continued to work as an artist until his death in 1994. His work is found in both private and institutional collections.

Roy Walker was a brother to both Merle and James and taught for many years at Novinger.
